As the name implies, the ISO file can be used on all supported systems. In addition, Windows 10's ISO file also supports booting from a USB flash drive or an external hard drive. If you've got one of those, you can then boot from your USB flash drive or external hard drive and get started right away! After the download is complete, click the link to open the installation file. The file will be downloaded to your computer's local drive. If you don't have a file manager yet (like Windows Explorer), then you can download and install a file manager, like FileZilla. Click on the installation file. The File Manager will open. Select the option to create a new folder and give it a name. For example, if you've named the folder Installation, then it should be created as "Installation" in your file system. Copy the ISO file to the Installation folder (Windows 7) or, to the folder that is created in the "Create a new folder" step (Windows 8/8.1/10). Open your Start Menu (Windows 7) and press Windows + X and select the option to open the "Settings" app. Select "System" from the left pane and click on the "Advanced system settings" button (Windows 7/8) or "Advanced" button (Windows 10). Select the option "Boot" from the left pane and click on the "Settings" button. Find the option "Windows Boot Manager". You will see the message: "Press F8 to select an operating system to boot to". Select the option of the ISO file (Windows 7/8/10). This will boot from the ISO file and then the following screen will appear: The installation process will begin. Let it run for some time and complete the process. Note: Some systems (like the ASUS RT-N16) have a pre-installed application called 'SimpleBoot', that is designed to boot from an ISO file. You can use that if your system has a pre-installed image loader. You'll be asked: "Would you like to install Windows without a product key?". If you say yes, then the next screen will be skipped. Done! 3. (Windows 10 only) The official Windows 10 image contains several files (one for each language) and is very large. It is 82157476af
